

There are many reasons why Lattitude Lakelands makes retirement even more attractive. With freehold ownership, stunning resort style facilities and a thriving community, you'll wish you'd got here sooner. But don't just take our word for it...

Ian and Lyn Landels,
Lattitude residents - moved from Willetton

"Being retired means setting our own agenda, whether it's daily walks on the beach or using the cycle path to pedal into town. It's important to move to a seniors' community that supports you now and in the future.

The social interaction at Lattitude is fantastic. It's also a secure environment, which is great for both singles and couples. Everyone looks out for each other and we always know our garden will be well looked after when we go away. We didn't look anywhere else - we just loved it straight away!"

Kevin and Maureen Cunningham,
Lattitude residents - moved from Kingsley

"We visited Lattitude Lakelands and made a quick decision which we have never doubted. When you sell your house you sell your security but here we saw it as buying a house and land package in a village.

It's much cheaper to live here than our old property, just in maintenance alone. We also used to have to get a house sitter when we traveled, now we can go visit the grandchildren stress-free."

Lattitude residents - moved from Secret Harbour

"We've moved and downsized before but we're far from feeling old! Owning a strata titled home was the main deciding factor for us. We really like the design of the homes at Lattitude, they're detached and give you the space you need."

Two of the first owners at Lattitude – moved from Serpentine

"Owning our home outright was very appealing. At Lattitude we have plenty of space and having our own backyard means we can make a bit of noise without bothering the neighbours.

The Clubhouse is a great facility. Whether we feel like kicking back and reading the paper, shooting pool or watching the footy at the bar, there's always someone around to have a laugh with."
